Christmas with Brad

Last Christmas, Brad Pitt asked Jamie Oliver to drop by and cook the family dinner. Jamie happily obliged. While this may seem like quite the privilege for Mr Pitt—having a celebrity chef cook the Christmas goose—it didn't come automatically. The road from unknown actor to screen legend was a long one, fraught with personal and psychic challenges. What can Brad's stars tell us about his incredible journey, his love life, and his plans for this Christmas?

William Bradley Pitt was born on the 18th December, 1963 in Shawnee, Oklahoma. As a Sagittarius in the Chinese year of the Rabbit, he would have quickly grown restless with his small-town surroundings, and begun to dream of something bigger—though it would be years before the explorer in him finally won out.

True to Sagittarian form, Pitt made a last-minute, seemingly irrational decision that set the wheels of destiny in motion.

With only two weeks to go at the University of Missouri, on the verge of graduating with a degree in advertising, he abandoned the program and took off for Los Angeles. The idea of settling into an ordinary life is not easy for a Sag to swallow, and will often send them running for the hills. But Hollywood was more than that for young Brad. He had a passion for films, describing them as "a portal into another world for me." His Sagittarian spirit had a thirst for exploration, and Hollywood represented all the uncharted territory he could ever want. Nine times out of ten, when faced with a choice between a sure bet with average gains and a longshot with a big potential payoff, Sagittarius will take aim for the stars.

Brad Pitt was now in Hollywood, but there was a problem—so were hundreds of other good-looking actors with dreams of making it big. So what did he do? He started at square one—acting lessons—and began to claw his way up. It's a process that virtually every actor has to endure, but not every actor is equipped with a Capricorn moon. This handy astrological component gives Brad emotional toughness and stoic determination. Rejection would have left him completely un-phased as he marched steadily toward his goal. He patched together a resumé of small roles in TV and film, waiting for his moment. When a slightly larger role in the 1991 film Thelma and Louise exposed wider audiences to his acting talent and overwhelming sex-appeal, the writing was on the wall. Brad's days as a struggling actor were over.

Looking for clarity this Christmas?

*Reach our talented psychics on 1-866-960-6498

But can anyone be young, rich, famous and gorgeous without paying a price? Pitt's astrological signature set him up for an interesting—some might say unstable—love life. His Chinese sign, the restless and fickle Rabbit, exacerbated his Sagittarius wanderlust, and the media showed no mercy. Interestingly, Brad's tendency to move about freely led him to date all three air signs.

First came the Libra, a young Gwyneth Paltrow who was also a rising star. The pair almost made it down the aisle, but Sag and Libra are both fond of keeping their options open (as is Rabbit), and the engagement was broken off.

The Aquarius, a stunning young Jennifer Aniston, succeeded in the formidable task of putting a ring on Brad Pitt's finger—but later reports hinted that she was too cool and detached (flagship Aquarian traits) for the relationship to work.

It was the Gemini—Sag's opposite—that finally won him over for good. The intense chemistry of this opposition is what made their film Mr. and Mrs. Smith sizzle. It's also what made them irresistible to one another off-screen. But why did this relationship last, instead of fizzling out like the others? It could be that Angelina's emotional style is easier for Brad to comprehend. His Capricorn moon is no fan of messy, unpredictable emotions—it prefers things neat and direct. Angelina's Aries Moon makes her emotional style as direct as they come. Her own colossal status in the film industry also helps to pacify Brad's restless, roving nature. Finally, she shares her husband's Chinese sign of Rabbit, so they know how to give each other plenty of space when needed.

As Brad turns 50, he appears to be more relevant than ever. With Ridley Scott's The Counselor in theatres, and the highly anticipated 12 Years a Slave to follow in January, the star's resumé is aging as gracefully as his looks—and not just on-screen. Besides supporting the ONE campaign against AIDS and poverty, he has founded the Make it Right Foundation, which operates in the field of sustainable building. No doubt, the Sagittarian-Rabbit combination always has Brad looking for fresh angles and ways to be inspired. Having reached dizzying heights in the acting world, he now seeks to break new ground as a humanitarian. So how far could he go as he matures? Public office? President? Stranger things have happened—but with a psychic signature as creative as this, it's far more likely that he will explore daring new roles on-screen, while using his global stature to do all the good he can.

Cooking, however, is one thing he admittedly doesn't do well. Perhaps Jamie will get the call again this year. ↗

Aries (Mar 21 - Apr 19)

Your psychic circuits are open, leading the way to a fortunate discovery. The downside is that the emotions of others can enter your headspace more easily. Don't worry—it's nothing a good, hard sweat can't fix! Working out keeps you grounded and connected to your body when the psychic vibes grow strong. It also tapers your desire for those holiday confections, and tunes your tastes to healthier foods. Your body will thank you in January. If a family function has to be missed in favor of a work obligation, make it up to your loved ones in style. An epiphany comes around the 17th. You now know have a key piece of the puzzle.

Taurus (Apr 20 - May 20)

Romantic partnership comes to the foreground as 2013 fades away. If you're committed to someone, the two of you have work to do. Ground rules may be necessary to bring structure to the life you share, but that doesn't mean spontaneity should go out the window! It's all about finding a balance. If you're single and looking, this is an excellent month to remedy the situation. Be disciplined about interacting with people; your knight in shining armour may be on the shy side. When an old friend appears, don't second-guess the person you are becoming. Psychic change and growth are inevitable when you listen to your higher self.

Gemini (May 21 - June 21)

The difference between a big idea that flies, and one that stays on the ground, is action in daily life. Break your master plan down into practical steps and get a head start on 2014. The more communicative you are with people around you, the more support you will find. Use physical exercise to burn off emotional tension and stay relaxed during the hectic holidays. Keeping the peace in a heated argument starts with your own psychic state. Small, frequent doses of yoga or meditation are your friend! There are plenty of people who examine the actions of others, but it's more difficult to look at your own. This is how a wounded relationship is healed.

Libra (Sept 23 - Oct 22)

A former friend or lover re-enters the picture, seemingly out of nowhere, and vies for your attention. Don't let clever words turn your world upside down! If a fresh start is to take place, the past must be approached directly and honestly. A financial door opens, but stepping through it may take longer than expected. Patience pays. In the meantime, you may feel like splashing out on something (or several things!) you don't really need. Staying focused on the essentials leaves room to treat yourself when the time is right. An existing relationship must enter a new phase when hidden feelings are brought to light.

Scorpio (Oct 23 - Nov 21)

The future looks bright, but it's not here quite yet. There are still a few loose ends to tie up in 2013. The more you can resolve—whether it's an argument with a friend or a broken doorknob—the better off you'll be when 2014 arrives. Reaching out to a neighbour causes a subtle but meaningful psychic shift. During the holiday season, the ways in which we are interconnected become more apparent. There are pros and cons to every relationship, but when expectations are done away with, there's a lot more joy to go around. A business deal turns out well, provided everything is laid out in the open. Don't take anything for granted.

Sagittarius (Nov 22 - Dec 21)

Does turning a year older feel like a drag, or is it fuel for creative exploration? This is an opportunity to chart new territory and go where you've never gone. Only you can visualise the changes you want. A hair or wardrobe overhaul puts your outward appearance in-sync with inner developments. Remember—renovation has spiritual roots. A business or financial deal looks attractive, but it's better left until the new year. Things are changing too quickly. Your partner wants to take it to the next level. Are you ready? Pay attention to the signals beneath words. If you're single, a professional relationship could become more.

Cancer (June 22 - July 22)

Whoever said the holiday season was a time of duties and obligations?! If your spirit wants to be playful this December, the best thing is to let it play. Schedule at least one or two things out of the ordinary, tell jokes, surprise your partner with something completely different. Contagious joy is the best gift anyone can give. If you look carefully in the mirror, you'll discover a small but significant way to change your appearance. Your outward world is shifting to reflect your new psychic reality. A winter fling is more than possible, and things could quickly get cozy. An established relationship takes an amorous turn, but there is also work to be done. Small gestures have a far-reaching effect.

Leo (July 23 - Aug 22)

Much like a car, your romantic relationship needs regular maintenance in order to run well. Stay on top of it by giving your partner's daily life a loving touch. This way, the two of you won't get to the point of needing repairs! Are you single and looking? Beyond the places you normally go—even beyond your comfort zone—new love awaits. As the saying goes, the best fruit is out on a limb. In a financial deal, you may get the sense that someone is not telling you the whole story—and you're probably right! The new year is a better time to finalise a deal. Want to get yourself something nice for Christmas? Perform a selfless act and a spiritual gift will appear.

Virgo (Aug 23 - Sep 22)

It's easy enough to lose yourself in all the comings and goings of the season. Things will run more smoothly if you plan something out of the ordinary for yourself—and maybe a significant other—along the way. After all, the only way to spread holiday cheer is to be cheerful yourself! A new romantic prospect is alluring to say the least, but dipping a toe in the water is preferable to diving in head first. A fresh new year will bring greater transparency to who this person really is, and whether the two of you could last. Giving gifts is special joy, but overspending is a risk. Staying within a set budget will come in handy when it's time for that first sobering sunrise in January.

Capricorn (Dec 22 - Jan 19)

It's safe to say the holiday season will be far from routine, as a number of psychic and synchronistic experiences find their way into your everyday life. The question is, where will these experiences take you? A task you have been trying to accomplish for quite some time is on the verge of being solved. Look for a timely piece of advice from a stranger to help finish the job. Meanwhile, your love life is in a phase of review and reflection. A past lover is on your mind, but it's only temporary as the year draws to a close. There will be a new romantic prospect soon; now is the time to look within. Finding your own inner truth will attract the right person.

Aquarius (Jan 20 - Feb 18)

2013 may have saved the best for last—at least in your case, Aquarius. You'll stay awake to new opportunities when others are liable to sleep through them, thereby proving that December can be a productive month. Don't put too much pressure on a romantic partner though, as a small argument could get heated. Nobody needs extra drama for the holidays. Food and drink are always a temptation this time of year, especially if you are trying to get in shape. A little indulgence is good for emotional wellbeing, but keeping it to a minimum gives you a head-start for 2014. Seek those healthy replacements that leave you feeling good hours later.

Pisces (Feb 19 - Mar 20)

Things get romantically heated between you and a significant other—but watch out for disagreements fueled by the same fire! Even if words are exchanged, a passionate row makes for a sizzling reconciliation. January may be a month away, but it's not too early to make plans. A new course of study makes you feel energetic and playful. Looking younger starts from within. Friendships reflect where you are and where you are going. One of them may be coming to an end, but don't worry; another is beginning. Break up the holiday routine by doing something unusual. An emotional connection to someone special is really worth celebrating.

The Spiritual Side of Christmas

For many, Christmas is the celebration of Christ's birth. Others see it as a continuation of ancient pagan rites, or a modern secular holiday defined by materialism and pop culture. But does this special day carry a spiritual or psychic truth that is one and the same everywhere? If so, how can we get in touch with it?

The average living room, decorated for Christmas, offers a portal into the spiritual past. Have you ever wondered why red, green and gold are prevalent? Red represents the blood of the enlightened savior in Christianity. Green represents eternal life, while gold represents the gifts given by three magi, or mystics, on the day of his birth. Long before that, pagans decorated their homes with evergreen boughs in midwinter. Why? To remind themselves of the power and vitality of life, even when the nights were at their coldest and darkest.

What about all those sparkling lights and glossy packages beneath the tree? In the ancient Roman festival of Saturnalia, which started on 17th December, people lit hundreds of candles to illuminate the darkness, representing the quest for spiritual truth. There was drinking, banqueting—even gifts. The festival culminated on 25th December, known as the "Birthday of the Unconquerable Sun." The solstice had passed, and the days would heretofore grow lighter and longer.

The mistletoe hanging from the door, the yule log, the carolers standing outside? All have ancient origins, and have evolved through the centuries. The symbols go on and on, taking us to various parts of the world in historical ages. We'll leave it to the scholars to discuss who borrowed from whom, and what the origins of the various customs really are. The simple truth is that Christmas is a rich blend of psychic energies that all stem from the same thing: The quest for spiritual light and truth. Here are a four practical things we can take from the various Christmas traditions.

Find your own 'passion'

As the days get shorter and darker, it's a perfect time to look within and find what really lights you up. What is your own source of joy? A new creative project, a budding love interest, or simply spending time with loved ones? Whatever it is, this passionate spark within you will bring you closer to your own divine purpose.

Give of yourself

Presents are an uplifting tradition during the darkest days of the year. But even better are the psychic gifts we give and receive.

When someone talks to you, listen with your whole being. Much like the growing daylight, truth and light grow when we take a genuine interest in one another.

Be in the moment

This time of year is a reminder that nature moves in cycles, and cannot be rushed. Rather than looking ahead to the future, why not abide in the here and now? There will be plenty of time for big plans when January rolls around. Having a spiritual Christmas means living fully in the moment.

Tune in to your body

The food we eat, and how we eat it, can have psychic effects. This doesn't mean you should skip the cake! When you do indulge, really enjoy. Be super-aware of the tastes and fragrances around you. The greater your awareness, the easier it will be to stay balanced. This is a simple truth that we can carry all year long.

'Tis the season for psychic guidance!

Broadcast Your Love Signal

The search for new love can sometimes feel like the search for life on other planets. So how do you contact your soulmate over the psychic airwaves?

Picture an abandoned radio station in the middle of nowhere. The satellite dish is rusty, the signal is weak, and nobody has been there for years. Now picture a row of giant satellite dishes pointed at the stars, moving in concert, transmitting powerful messages to the far reaches of the galaxy. Which image represents your signal? The point is, unless you think big, you won't get big results. Remember—the psychic effort and energy you put into your search may not come back to you instantly, but somebody out there is listening. Start by knowing that you are powerful, that you have the psychic strength to make contact with your ideal partner.

With so many different signals riding the airwaves, it's important that your call for new love is constant. Try sitting down at the same time every evening to practice the following visualisation: You and the object of your desire are drawing nearer to one another. Eventually you can hear the sound of their voice, sense the warmth of their touch, feel the softness of their kiss. Be more and more specific as you visualise your partner-to-be. Send out signals as often as you can throughout the day, letting them know that you are ready for them to appear on your life. Be consistent and you will see results!

Sometimes your love signal is weakened or blocked by past relationships. In this case, you'll find it difficult to make contact with your new partner. If you've been seeing or talking to an old flame, it may be time to cut ties. If you've been holding on to mementos associated with past love, allow yourself to let them go. A psychic reader, relationship counselor, or good friend can help you reset your signal. When you feel new inside—free from past heartaches and ready to embrace an entirely new relationship—then you know your signal is strong.

Once your love signal is up and running, there are things you can do to boost it even more. Try writing out the qualities you desire in a partner. Fold the paper, place it under a piece of rose quartz and leave it there. Change the paper every week, writing out the various qualities you desire in a partner. If your walls are decorated with solitary objects or images, replace them with pairs of objects, and images that have a strong sensory feel. Bring flowers—especially red roses—into your home as much as possible. If you sleep in a small bed, you might want to consider upgrading! Even the smallest actions, if carried out with strong intentions, will strengthen your signal.

Remember—it's a two-way signal. Your true love is out there somewhere, calling to you in their own way. If you focus on them, you may pick up a surprising clue. An idea, a name or a place will suddenly pop into your head. Be receptive and listen to your intuition. As you continue to transmit and strengthen your psychic love signal, things are bound to happen that will lead you closer to the relationship you seek. It's only a matter of being open, releasing expectations, and trusting that the universe has a plan for the two of you to find each other. Whatever you do, don't give up—a love like this may not be easy to find, but it's worth the wait!

Featured Psychic Neelam

According to Numerology, my soul's spiritual path is Seven, the number of the Psychic Visionary. I have had many visions, all around the time of the birth of my children. I think the feeling of unconditional love when you become a mother can further develop psychic ability.

My first psychic experience was very early on in life: My grand father's spirit used to visit me (and still does) with the fragrance of Sandalwood. He passed over when I was a toddler.

The loving relatives of clients always come forward in my readings. I think that I am a very caring, thoughtful, loving person, and that my personal psychic power roots from this.

When I enter the Spiritual world to give a reading, I forget the details when the reading is finished. All I remember is the feeling of elation of having done my best; I get a pat on the shoulder from my guides. They know how deeply sensitive I am, so it would not be good for me to remember each reading. I know that the Angels care about me a lot, and I talk to them all the time.

In a good psychic reading, my spiritual guides take over and do all the hard work. I always pray to the Divine Source for guidance, and to help me do right for my clients. I feel very honoured to be a psychic. It gives me great happiness and inner fulfilment to know that I have contributed to helping others in my own unique way!
